Karega Bailey released a new song and video, "Hope Dealer", and discusses it largely as an anthem for Roses in Concrete Community School, of which he is the Director of Special Education as well as a leader of the arts program. Speaking about the song's message, Bailey says, "Hope dealing requires the hope dealer to give portions that others may see as fatiguing, but that is the cost to disrupt hopelessness," a phenomenon to which he contributes - along with all other RiC teachers and staff - significantly.
